BELIEF STATEMENT

We believe people need financial security, and cash might be the most effective and efficient way to provide it.

The time has come to consider new, bold ways to make our economy work again for all Americans. In a time of immense wealth, no one should live in poverty, nor should the middle class be consigned to a future of permanent stagnation or anxiety. Automation, globalization, and financialization are changing the nature of work, and these shifts require us to rethink how to guarantee economic opportunity for all.

A basic income is a bold idea with a long history and the potential to free people to pursue the work and life they choose. Now is the time to think seriously about how recurring, unconditional cash stipends could work, how to pay for them, and what the political path might be to make them a reality, even while many of us are engaged in protecting the existing safety net.

The undersigned commit to work over the coming months and years to research, experiment, and inspire others to think through how best to design cash programs that empower Americans to live and work in the new economy.

INSPIRED BY THE IDEA OF A BASIC INCOME?

The Economic Security Project is a two year fund to support exploration and experimentation with unconditional cash stipends. We are funding projects like academic research, state and local basic income campaigns, and cultural projects around economic security. We are just getting started -- join in.

The Economic Security Project is co-chaired by future of work instigator Natalie Foster, Facebook Co-Founder Chris Hughes, and Roosevelt Institute Fellow Dorian Warren.

Donors and advisors to the Project include Peter Barnes, Roy Bahat, Juliana Bidadanure, Misha Chellam, Future Justice Fund, Goldhirsh Foundation, Andy Stern, Tom Matzzie, Serkan Piantino, Hemant Taneja, Felicia Wong, and Albert Wenger. The Hopewell Fund acts as our fiscal sponsor.
